PROGRAMS OF THE NEH RESEARCH DIVISION	15
---------------------------------------	----

INTRODUCTION

Research Opportunities through Centers for Advanced Study and International Research Organizations

The National Endowment for the Humanities provides support to independent centers for advanced study and international research organizations for postdoctoral fellowship and research grant programs for humanities scholars. Centers for advanced study offer scholars opportunities to pursue independent research in the humanities while benefiting from collegial association with scholars in other areas or disciplines of study. International research organizations assist scholars conducting research on foreign cultures. The centers and organizations establish their own peer review procedures for the selection of NEH grant recipients and administer the awards. Tenure of the fellowships at residential centers may run from four to twelve consecutive months, and stipends may also vary. Grants for international research also vary in tenure and amount. Eligibility for NEH research awards is limited to United States citizens and foreign nationals who have been resident in the United States for the three years immediately preceding the application deadline for the grant. NEH research opportunities are intended for persons who have already completed their formal academic training. Consequently, persons seeking support for work in pursuit of a degree are not eligible for NEH research grants. Some of the institutions listed below support predoctoral students with private funding; interested applicants should contact the organizations or centers directly.

For further information and application materials, write to the appropriate center or organization. No application materials are available from the Endowment.

In 1996-97, NEH fellowships will be available at each of the following centers:

American Antiquarian Society
Folger Shakespeare Library
The Huntington
Institute for Advanced Study
 School of Social Sciences
Institute of Early American History and Culture
John Carter Brown Library
National Humanities Center
Newberry Library
Schomburg Center for Research in Black
 Culture--New York Public Library
School of American Research
Winterthur Museum, Garden, and Library

NEH fellowships and other research grants supporting international research will also be available through the following organizations:

Albright Institute of Archaeological Research
 (Jerusalem)
American Academy in Rome
American Council of Learned Societies in cooperation with the Social Science
 Research Council
American Institute of Indian Studies
American Philological Association/Thesaurus
 Linguae Latinae (Munich)
American Research Center in Egypt (Cairo)
American Research Institute in Turkey (Istanbul and Ankara)
American School of Classical Studies at Athens
Committee on Scholarly Communication with China
Cyprus American Archaeological Research Institute
 (Nicosia)
International Research and Exchanges Board

Support for individual research is also available directly through other programs of the NEH Research Division, for example, Fellowships for University Teachers, Fellowships for College Teachers and Independent Scholars, Summer Stipends, and Basic Research. A list of these programs, their deadlines, and telephone numbers can be found on pages 15-16 of this booklet.

The Humanities

The act that established the National Endowment for the Humanities says "The term 'humanities' includes, but is not limited to, the study of the following: language, both modern and classical; linguistics; literature; history; jurisprudence; philosophy; archaeology; comparative religion; ethics; the history, criticism, and theory of the arts; those aspects of social sciences which have humanistic content and employ humanistic methods; and the study and application of the humanities to the human environment with particular attention to reflecting our diverse heritage, traditions, and history and to the relevance of the humanities to the current conditions of national life."

CENTERS FOR ADVANCED STUDY

American Antiquarian Society

The American Antiquarian Society (AAS) maintains a major research library in American history, literature, and culture through 1876. The library includes some 700,000 books and pamphlets; 15,000 newspaper titles; 200,000 pieces of graphic arts materials including broadsides, political cartoons, maps, and photographs; 60,000 pieces of sheet music; and nearly 2,000 running feet of manuscripts. The society's holdings are especially rich for projects in the history of the book, including bibliography and the history of printing and publishing; literature; the history of Puritanism; cultural history; intellectual history; American state and local history; and social history, including the history of reform, family history, and women's history. The collections are strong chronologically from the early colonial period to the late nineteenth century. The AAS-NEH fellows are part of a community that includes the AAS staff, area faculty, and the recipients of AAS short-term fellowships (including scholars from all over the U.S. and abroad, Ph.D. candidates, teachers and librarians in grades K-12, and creative artists and writers producing work for the general public). Further opportunities for collegial association are provided by the society's Program in the History of the Book in American Culture; its seminars in American history, American literary history, American bibliography and book trade history, American art history, and American music history; lunchtime colloquia; and more informal gatherings. At least two AAS-NEH fellowships are available for 1996-97.

Folger Shakespeare Library

Known internationally for its preeminent collections of Shakespearean and Elizabethan writings, the Folger Shakespeare Library is also a center for research on virtually every aspect of social, cultural, and political life from the medieval period to the mid-eighteenth century. Its 250,000 books, 55,000 manuscripts, 250,000 playbills, and 24,000 artworks and artifacts relate not only to the British Isles but also to the Continent and, to some extent, the New World. Fellows may join more than 4,000 registered readers and members of the Folger Institute in any of the series of seminars, conferences, workshops, symposia, lectures, and colloquia regularly scheduled at the library. Fellows also have easy access to the Library of Congress. Three NEH fellowships are available for 1996-97.

The Huntington

The Huntington is an independent research center with extensive holdings in British and American history, literature, art history, and the history of science. These collections range chronologically from the eleventh to the twentieth centuries. The library contains approximately 500,000 rare books, pamphlets, extra-illustrated books, maps, and ephemera, 500,000 reference works, 3.4 million manuscripts, and 400,000 photographs. Published guides are available for the American, British, medieval, and literary manuscript collections. The art division holds 75,000 British and American paintings, drawings, watercolors, and fine prints. The Smithsonian Archives of American Art also has a center at the Huntington. There are separate reference libraries in the art and garden divisions. The research division supports an extensive fellowship program to fund short-term fellows and sponsors a number of conferences, lectures, and seminars. Up to three NEH fellowships will be available for 1996-97.

Institute for Advanced Study

The Institute for Advanced Study was founded in 1930 and since its beginning has been internationally recognized as one of the world's foremost centers for theoretical research and intellectual inquiry. There are four schools: historical studies, social science, mathematics, and natural sciences. Located on an 800-acre site, the institute is totally independent of Princeton University; however, there is a great deal of intellectual, cultural, and social interaction.

The School of Social Science is devoted to a multidisciplinary, comparative, and international approach to social science research and brings together scholars with various perspectives to examine historical and contemporary problems. Disciplines represented in the school have included history, philosophy, and literary studies as well as anthropology, politics, economics, sociology, and other social science disciplines. The school organizes a weekly seminar at which members as well as invited guests present their ongoing work. Each year there is also a general theoretical or empirical focus that provides common ground for roughly half of the members. About fifteen postdoctoral fellows are selected each year. About five NEH fellowships are available for 1996-97.

The Institute of Early American History and Culture

The Institute of Early American History and Culture supports study and publication in early American history from the sixteenth century to approximately 1815. Its field of interest encompasses all aspects of the lives of North America's indigenous and immigrant peoples during the colonial, revolutionary, and early national periods of the United States and related histories of the Caribbean, Latin America, the British Isles, Europe, and Africa. An autonomous organization founded in 1943 by its joint sponsors, the College of William and Mary and the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation, the institute publishes the William and Mary Quarterly, monographs, and documentary editions, and regularly plans and supports scholarly conferences. The institute annually offers a single, two-year, junior postdoctoral fellowship, one year of which is supported by the NEH. In addition to research and writing, fellows are encouraged to participate with the senior staff of working scholars in the institute's varied academic activities. Institute fellows also have the option of spending a summer at the Huntington Library, on a full grant, within five years of their residency in Williamsburg. The potential of an applicant's project for book publication is a major factor in awarding the fellowship.

John Carter Brown Library

The John Carter Brown Library is an independently funded and administered center for advanced study on the campus of Brown University. The library's collection consists almost entirely of primary printed sources (books, pamphlets, and maps) relating to all aspects of the discovery, exploration, settlement, and development of the Americas, from Hudson Bay to Tierra del Fuego, during the colonial period (1493-ca. 1825). The library's principal holdings emphasize such areas as European impressions about the Americas, Brazilians, native American languages, American revolutionary pamphlets, and Caribbeana. Maritime history and the comparative history of the Americas--Spanish, Portuguese, French, Dutch, English, African, Amerindian--are particular areas of interest. The library awards approximately fifteen short-term fellowships (two to four months) each year, which are open to citizens of every country, and three NEH-supported long-term fellowships (usually six months), which are open only to U.S. citizens and foreign nationals who have lived in the U.S. for the three years immediately preceding the application deadline. Fellows are invited to participate in the intellectual life of Brown University, as well as to join in the activities of the library itself.

National Humanities Center

The National Humanities Center offers thirty-five to forty fellowships annually for scholars in the humanities to work at the center during the academic year. In 1996-97, approximately twelve of these fellowships will be supported by the National Endowment for the Humanities. Fellowships are open to scholars in all fields of the humanities and also to individuals from other fields of inquiry or from professional and public life whose work has a humanistic dimension. Up to one-third of the center's fellowships are awarded to promising young scholars who are no more than ten years beyond the completion of their graduate training and are working on projects beyond the revision of their dissertations. Applications are evaluated by specialists and by an interdisciplinary panel of distinguished scholars in the humanities. The center provides technical assistance with the preparation of manuscripts, and daily delivery of books and research materials; fellows also have the use of private studies. The center's building includes facilities for lectures, seminars, conferences, and luncheons. The center is situated in the Research Triangle Park of North Carolina, adjacent to Chapel Hill, Durham, and Raleigh. In addition to a fellowship stipend, the center provides travel expenses to and from North Carolina for fellows and their immediate families.

Newberry Library

The Newberry Library, founded in 1887, is a privately endowed independent research library dedicated primarily to study in the humanities. Its collections are composed of more than 1.5 million volumes and 5 million manuscripts, with a strong general collection focused on Europe and the Americas from the late Middle Ages to the twentieth century. Many of the Newberry's special collections are internationally noted, including materials in the following fields: discovery, exploration, and settlement of the New World; history of Native Americans; the American West; family and community history; literature and history of the Midwest, especially the Chicago Renaissance; the Renaissance in Europe; Portuguese and Luso-Brazilian history; cartography; music history and theory; printing; and early philology and linguistics. A variety of fellowships, conferences, and seminars enriches the Newberry's academic community. At least five NEH fellowships are available for 1996-97.

Schomburg Center for Research in Black Culture - New York Public Library

The Schomburg Center for Research in Black Culture is a research unit of the New York Public Library. It is devoted to collecting, preserving, and providing access to research resources on black heritage. Established in 1926 as a reference collection, it has evolved into a comprehensive research library whose collections number more than 5 million items. They include more than 120,000 bound volumes, 85,000 microforms, 3.5 million manuscripts, 8,000 works of art, 250,000 photographs, and 1,700 serials.

The Schomburg Center's Scholars-in-Residence Program assists scholars whose research and writing on black history and culture would benefit from extended access to the center's resources. The program supports postdoctoral research in the humanities on African, Afro-American, and Afro-Caribbean themes. Fellowships funded by the program allow recipients to spend from six to twelve months in residence at the Schomburg Center. Although fellows devote most of their time to research and writing, they are also encouraged to take part in the center's scholarly and educational program, which includes colloquia, symposia, seminars, forums, and research conferences. At least two NEH fellowships are available for 1996-97.

School of American Research

Founded in 1907, the School of American Research is a center for advanced studies in anthropology and allied disciplines. It is dedicated to supporting scholars and publishing original research that contributes to a better understanding of the culture, evolution, and behavior of the human species. The school pursues its goals through six programs: It supports resident scholars for nine-month tenures, sponsors a series of advanced seminars, awards the J.I. Staley Prize for outstanding books in anthropology, maintains a research collection of southwestern native American art, publishes scholarly books, and holds educational events for the public. The Resident Scholar program offers fellows the time and facilities essential for creative intellectual pursuits. The school's unique campus provides an atmosphere that nourishes the scholarly spirit by combining solitude and freedom from academic responsibilities with the lively exchange of ideas found in an active community of scholars. Each resident scholar receives a stipend, an apartment and an office on the school's campus, library assistance, and other benefits during a tenure of nine months--September 1 through May 31. Three NEH fellowships are available for 1996-97.

Winterthur is a center for advanced study of America's artistic, cultural, intellectual, and social history. Its library holds approximately half a million imprints, manuscripts, visual materials, trade catalogues, auction and exhibition catalogues, and printed ephemera for research from the seventeenth century to the early twentieth century. Its museum collection includes 89,000 domestic artifacts and works of art made or used in America to 1860.

Winterthur sponsors a broad range of public and academic programs, including scholarly conferences and three graduate programs in art conservation and American history with the University of Delaware. The institution also publishes scholarly books and Winterthur Portfolio: A Journal of American Material Culture. Winterthur's Research Fellowship Program offers predoctoral and postdoctoral support to academic, independent, and museum scholars. Fellows are provided a library carrel, 24-hour access to the library's circulating collections, and circulation privileges at nearby Morris Library of the University of Delaware. Scholars live in the Research Fellows Residence, a comfortable stone house on the Winterthur grounds. Both the residence and the library are fully equipped to accommodate personal computers. One NEH fellowship will be available for 1996-97 and may be shared by several fellows choosing four or six month terms.

INTERNATIONAL RESEARCH ORGANIZATIONS

Albright Institute of Archaeological Research, Jerusalem

The W. F. Albright Institute of Archaeological Research in Jerusalem (AIAR) was originally established as the principal overseas center of the American Schools of Oriental Research (ASOR) founded in 1900. In 1970, AIAR was separately incorporated and renamed after its most distinguished director, W. F. Albright, while remaining one of the three ASOR centers. AIAR promotes and supports resident predoctoral and postdoctoral research in Near Eastern studies in a broad range of disciplines, including archaeology, history of art and architecture, anthropology, biblical studies, history, religion, language, linguistics, and literature. Its annual program is composed of a series of lectures, reports, seminars, workshops, and field trips organized according to its fellows' interests. AIAR facilities include living accommodations for thirty people and a research library dedicated to Near Eastern studies with more than 24,000 volumes and over 450 journal titles, along with significant map and artifact collections. Its offices and labs are equipped with computer and e-mail communications systems. Forty fellows from the United States and other countries participate as long-term research appointees each year. AIAR also serves as a support base for numerous short-term scholars and visitors and for a large number of staff, student, and volunteer participants in the twenty-two seasonal excavation and publication projects affiliated with ASOR. The Albright is also the organizing institution for a new international research project -- "The Neo-Assyrian Empire in the 7th Century BC: A Study of the Interaction between Center and Periphery" -- involving 50 scholars working in Bahrain, Cyprus, Egypt, Greece, Iraq, Iran, Israel, Jordan, Spain, Syria, Tunisia and Turkey. Up to two NEH fellowships are available for 1996-97.

American Academy in Rome

The American Academy in Rome, founded in 1894 and chartered by Congress in 1905, is a working residential community of American scholars and creative artists. Scholarly research at the Academy focuses on a variety of fields, among them classical studies and archaeology, postclassical studies (including medieval and renaissance studies), modern Italian studies, and the history of art. The Academy's resources include a major research library of more than 114,000 volumes with particular strength in classical antiquity, Roman topography, and the history of art and architecture. They also include the Fototeca Unione, a research collection of more than 30,000 photographs of ancient sites in Italy, North Africa, and the Middle East. The work of the fellows is regularly presented through a series of seminars, colloquia, exhibitions, and concerts. There are weekly trips to historical monuments in Rome and lengthy visits twice each year to other parts of Italy and the Mediterranean. In addition, the Academy participates in the union of twenty-three other national academies in Rome. Some scholarly studies by fellows, as well as archaeological excavation reports, are published in the Academy's Memoirs series, which is published by the University of Michigan Press. Up to three NEH fellowships are available for 1996-97.

American Council of Learned Societies and Social Science Research Council: Fellowships in International and Area Studies

The ACLS is a private federation of 53 national scholarly organizations dedicated to the advancement of humanistic scholarship in all fields of learning. The SSRC is an international association devoted to the advancement of interdisciplinary research in the social sciences. Jointly they offer postdoctoral fellowship support to scholars proposing to do research in international and area studies in the humanities and the humanistic aspects of the social sciences. The quality of the proposed research and the importance of the potential contribution to scholarship are the primary criteria used in awarding these fellowships. In addition, the councils seek projects that involve multidisciplinary and comparative approaches. Grants of up to $15,000 will be offered for field research, for write-up, for comparative theoretical research, and for the analysis of previously gathered materials. Applicants working in literature, philosophy, religion, and art history, disciplines relatively underrepresented in some of the area studies, are especially encouraged to apply. Support may be requested for work on all foreign areas except Western Europe. Competition guidelines and deadlines vary for different areas; check with the appropriate council for details.

Requests for application forms must contain the following information: 1) Highest academic degree held and the date received; 2) country of citizenship or permanent legal residence; 3) academic or other position; 4) field of specialization; 5) proposed subject of research or study; 6) proposed date for beginning tenure of the award and duration requested; and 7) specific award program for which the application is requested.

Application forms for research dealing primarily with China and Eastern Europe should be requested in writing from the:

American Institute of Indian Studies

The American Institute of Indian Studies, a consortium of more than forty-five U.S. colleges and universities, was founded in 1961 by scholars committed to increasing accurate, intensive knowledge of India's culture, history, languages, and traditions. The institute's principal activity is the awarding of fellowships to support scholarly research in India on the broadest possible range of topics and disciplines in the humanities. With U.S. offices in Chicago and headquarters in New Delhi, the institute maintains regional offices in Calcutta, Madras, and Pune. Each provides a meeting place for scholars and organized opportunities for seminars, receptions, and lectures. In addition, the institute maintains an Archives and Research Center for Ethnomusicology in New Delhi and a Center for Art and Archaeology in Varanasi. The staffs at these regional offices and centers obtain necessary clearances for the fellows from the Indian government, secure affiliations for fellows with Indian academic and research institutions, and otherwise facilitate the fellows' scholarly research. The institute awards approximately twenty long-term postdoctoral fellowships in rupees to scholars of distinction or high promise in all academic disciplines. For 1996-97, NEH will supplement up to seven fellowships in the humanities with U.S. dollars.

American Philological Association/Thesaurus Linguae Latinae

The American Philological Association invites applications for a one-year fellowship, tenable from July 1996 through June 1997, which will enable an American scholar to participate in the work of the Thesaurus Linguae Latinae in Munich. Fellows at the TLL develop a broadened perspective of the range and complexity of the Latin language and culture from the classical period through the early Middle Ages, contribute signed articles to the Thesaurus, have the opportunity to participate in a collaborative international research project, and work with senior scholars in the field of Latin lexicography. The fellowship carries a stipend in the amount of $31,500 and is made possible in part by a grant from the NEH.

Applicants must be United States citizens or permanent residents, already have the Ph.D., or anticipate the award of the degree by July 1, 1996. The fellowship offers valuable experience for scholars in a variety of specialties (e.g., Latin language and literature, Roman Law, Roman History, the literature of early Christianity); although it is not limited to individuals in Latin philology, applicants should possess a thorough familiarity with and a special interest in the Latin language. It is anticipated that applicants will already have a reading knowledge of German and will be willing to work toward proficiency in spoken German. Further details will be sent to applicants upon request.

Applications should include a curriculum vitae, a statement of what benefits the applicant expects to derive from the Fellowship for his/her research and teaching, and the names of three referees, whom the applicant should ask to send supporting letters to the Secretary without further notice. Candidates will be considered by the APA's TLL Fellowship Committee, which serves as the selection committee. The Committee will choose a short-list of candidates to be invited for interview at the Annual Meeting in December in Atlanta, Georgia, and the name of the successful candidate will be announced shortly thereafter.

American Research Center in Egypt

The American Research Center In Egypt, Inc. (ARCE), a consortium of thirty-six North American universities and museums, was founded in 1948 to promote research in Egypt. Its broad aims are to foster a fresh and more profound knowledge of Egypt and the Near East through scholarly research, to disseminate knowledge of Egypt, and to promote American-Egyptian cultural relations. In pursuit of these goals, ARCE supports archaeological projects conducted by research teams led by senior American scholars, a fellowship program that enables American scholars and students to conduct research in all periods and in all phases of Egyptian civilization, and special historical and literary projects in Egypt in archaeology, art history, Islamic studies, the humanities, and the social sciences, including development studies. The center, located in Cairo, provides a reference library and a meeting place for scholars. Its staff helps scholars obtain necessary clearances from the Egyptian government and otherwise facilitates their research. The Center administers a major AID grant for the conservation and preservation of Egyptian antiquities. Two NEH fellowships are available for 1996-97.

The American Research Institute in Turkey

The American Research Institute in Turkey has a membership of thirty-five North American universities and museums. It was founded in 1964 to advance knowledge and enhance mutual understanding between the U.S. and Turkey by supporting and promoting research and study in anthropology, art and archaeology, history, linguistics, philology, and Turkology "with all its ramifications into social, cultural and economic fields in ancient, medieval and modern times." Branch facilities in Istanbul and Ankara provide full-time representation in Turkey for American institutions of higher education. Each branch is administered by an American scholar who is appointed as both Branch Director and Resident Fellow. The branches provide researchers in Turkey a base of operations, institutional affiliation, orientation assistance, and introductions to host-country scholars. Istanbul maintains a research facility and a 6,000-volume library in Byzantine, Islamic, Ottoman, and modern Turkish studies. In Ankara scholars have access to a 6,500-volume library on archaeology. Two or three NEH fellowships are available for 1996-97.

American School of Classical Studies at Athens

The American School of Classical Studies at Athens was founded in 1881 to provide scholars and graduate students in ancient Greek history, art, archaeology, language, and literature the opportunity to pursue their studies and research in Greece itself. At its main building in Athens, the School administers an outstanding research library, the Blegen, with over 60,000 volumes devoted to ancient Greece. In 1926, the School dedicated, adjacent to the main building complex, the Gennadius Library, its second major library resource, which provides scholars of postclassical Greek studies some 90,000 volumes as well as archives dedicated to medieval, Byzantine and post-Byzantine, and modern Greece. The School also sponsors excavations and provides centers for advanced research in archaeological and related topics at its excavations in the Athenian Agora and Corinth, and now houses a recently opened archaeological laboratory in the main building in Athens. By agreement with the Greek government, the School is authorized to serve as liaison with the Greek Ministry of Culture on behalf of American students and scholars for the acquisition of permits to excavate and to study museum collections. One NEH fellowship is available for the academic year 1996-97.

Committee on Scholarly Communication with China

The Committee on Scholarly Communication with China (CSCC) was established in 1966 at the joint initiation of the American Council of Learned Societies, the National Academy of Sciences, and the Social Science Research Council. The Research Program of the CSCC's National Program for Advanced Study and Research in China serves the Committee's long-term commitment to promoting and broadening scholarly communication between the American and Chinese academic communities. With funding provided by NEH, the Research Program offers support to American scholars to carry out research in China in the humanities. Participants in this program receive support for long-term individual research in China as well as limited related research elsewhere in Asia. The tenure of each grant ranges from two months to one year. The coordinated efforts of the CSCC's offices in Washington, D.C. and Beijing assist grantees participating in this program to secure institutional affiliations and support in China to ensure successful research experiences. Up to ten grants funded by NEH will be available in 1996-97.

Application deadline: October 13, 1995

Cyprus American Archaeological Research Institute

The Cyprus American Archaeological Research Institute (CAARI) in Nicosia, founded in 1978 and the youngest of the three American Schools of Oriental Research, welcomes scholars from all branches of ancient Aegean and Near Eastern studies with an emphasis on Cyprus, as well as other disciplines belonging to the humanities. CAARI is located in the center of Nicosia. In addition to accommodations for twelve scholars, there are excellent research facilities in the form of a 10,000-volume library, comprehensive map and reference collections, a drafting room, darkroom, laboratories, and computer equipment. The 25,000-volume research library of the Cyprus Museum and the larger Makarios Foundation Library are easily accessible. One NEH fellowship is available for 1996-97.

Application deadline: October 15, 1995

International Research and Exchanges Board

The International Research and Exchanges Board (IREX) provides field access for US specialists to scholars, policymakers, and research resources of Central and Eastern Europe, the Newly Independent States of Eurasia, and Mongolia.

IREX also designs and implements training programs to help policy and academic specialists from the region overcome a legacy of international isolation. These programs draw on the resources of American policy and academic communities to provide emerging leaders with opportunities to develop new skills in local governance, journalism, curriculum development, finance and entrepreneurship, parliamentary democracy, and ethnic-conflict resolution. IREX thereby enables them to make stronger contributions to the transitions underway in their own countries.

In these efforts, IREX builds upon strong organizational alliances with major US academic, government, foundation, business, and media partners. NEH funds support humanities scholars through a number of IREX programs:

Individual Advanced Research Opportunities grants support research by predoctoral and postdoctoral scholars for periods of one to twelve months at institutions in IREX program countries. Application deadline: November 1, 1995

Short-term Travel Grants provide support for brief visits (one to two weeks) associated with scholarly projects on IREX program countries. Funded activities include:

- individual scholarly research visits to archives, libraries, museums, etc., or visits for conducting interviews;
- presentations at scholarly conferences;
- invited lectures or consultations;
- collaborative projects such as joint publications or comparative surveys;
- visits of up to two foreign colleagues to the United States for collaborative research or conference presentations.

Application deadlines: October 1, 1995; February 1, 1996; and June 1, 1996

Special Projects in Central and Eastern Europe and Eurasia grants support collaborative projects that involve both US and foreign participants. Application deadline: March 1, 1996

Special Projects in Library and Information Science grants support librarians, archivists, and information specialists pursuing projects relating to IREX program countries. Application deadline: mid-January 1996 (exact date to be announced)
