The National Endowment for the Humanities, through its fellowship programs, encourages and supports advanced study and research in humanistic disciplines by people of diverse interests, backgrounds, and circumstances: senior scholars; younger scholars; free-lance writers and other independent scholars; faculty members of institutions that are oriented toward research; faculty members of two-year, four-year, and five-year colleges and universities.

As diverse as the people are the activities and projects eligible for support: projects may contribute to the conception and substance of individual courses in the humanities, to scholarly knowledge, or to the general public's understanding of the humanities; they may consist of work having a broad interpretive intent, study or research within one's own field of competence, or study outside one's field that will extend one's competence and enlarge one's understanding of that field.

NEH Fellows need not have advanced degrees, but neither candidates for degrees nor persons seeking support for work toward a degree are eligible to apply.

Fellowships are offered through two programs, Fellowships for Independent Study and Research and Fellowships for College Teachers. A person may not apply in the same year to both.

Successful applicants to either program may begin tenure of their fellowships as early as January 1, 1983, and as late as the beginning of the spring term of the 1983-84 academic year.

Fellowships for Independent Study and Research

Tenure: 6 to 12 months
Stipend: Up to $25,000
Application Deadline: June 1, 1982
Award Announcement: Early December, 1982

These fellowships are for scholars and other interpreters of the humanities who can make significant contributions to humanistic thought and knowledge. Applications are welcome from college and university faculty members and from others who work in the humanities, from people with broad humanistic interests as well as from scholars working in specialties. While continuing its commitment to the work of established, senior scholars, the Endowment also wishes to encourage and sustain the work of younger scholars. This group includes both faculty members who hold the rank of instructor or assistant professor and people who have no academic affiliation but stand at comparably early stages in their careers.

Fellowships for College Teachers

Tenure: 6 to 12 Months
Stipend: Up to $25,000
Application Deadline: June 1, 1982
Award Announcement: Early December, 1982

These fellowships provide opportunities for college teachers to pursue full-time independent study and research that will enhance their capacities as teachers, scholars, or interpreters of the humanities to the public, and enable them to make contributions to knowledge and teaching in the humanities. This program is intended for teachers whose day-to-day responsibilities lie in the teaching of undergraduate students, particularly in two-year, four-year, and five-year colleges and in universities which do not have Ph.D. programs. The program is predicated upon an equal respect for study and research directed toward scholarly publication and for study and research directed toward teaching. It is designed to support the whole range of activities, from general study to specialized research, in which college teachers engage in order to advance the understanding of issues in the humanities. Applicants teaching in undergraduate colleges and universities should consider applying for support in this program even if the interests of their fellowship projects are distinct from their teaching interests and even if they are in the early stages of their careers.
