

National Endowment
for the Humanities

Division of Fellowships and Seminars

---

NEH Fellowships at Centers for

Advanced Study

---

1984-85

NEH Fellowships at Centers for Advanced Study 1984-85

National Endowment for the Humanities fellowships at Centers for Advanced Study offer unique opportunities for humanists to pursue independent research and at the same time to benefit from stimulating interaction with colleagues in similar and different fields. Fellowships in this program are awarded and administered by the Centers themselves.

Fellowship tenure may run from six to twelve consecutive months, and stipends vary at the different Centers. Eligibility for NEH-Centers Fellowships varies from Center to Center, but neither candidates for degrees nor persons seeking support for work toward degrees are eligible to apply.

Other fellowship opportunities, separate from NEH and with different tenure and eligibility requirements, are also available at most centers.

For further information and application materials about NEH-Centers Fellowships, write directly to the appropriate Center.

In addition, the Endowment itself offers the following fellowship programs: Fellowships for Independent Study and Research, Fellowships for College Teachers, Summer Stipends, and Summer Seminars for College Teachers. For information about these programs, write to: National Endowment for the Humanities Division of Fellowships & Seminars, Room 316 1100 Pennsylvania Avenue, N.W. Washington, D.C. 20506

National Endowment
for the Humanities

For 1984-85, NEH-Centers Fellowships for scholars, teachers, and other interpreters of the humanities will be available at each of the following Centers:

Albright Institute of Archaeological Research (Jerusalem)
American Academy in Rome
American Antiquarian Society
American Center of Oriental Research (Amman)
American Philological Association (Munich)
American Research Center in Egypt (Cairo)
Center for Advanced Study in the Behavioral Sciences
Council on Foreign Relations
Hastings Center
Huntington Library
Institute for Advanced Study
Institute of Early American History and Culture
National Humanities Center
Newberry Library
School of American Research
Villa I Tatti—Center for Italian Renaissance Studies (Florence)
Winterthur Museum and Gardens

For further information about the Centers, see the following pages.

National Endowment
for the Humanities

Advanced Study Centers

Albright Institute of Archaeological Research

The Albright, in Jerusalem, is the oldest of the overseas research institutes of the American Schools of Oriental Research. Completed in 1931, the Albright Institute building, located near Herod's gate to the Old City of Jerusalem, houses a library of more than 10,000 volumes, thus providing a nucleus of scholarly materials for the study of the archaeology, history, literature, and religion of Syro-Palestine. The Institute provides hostel and dining facilities for visiting scholars. Other facilities include drafting rooms, a darkroom, and laboratories. The Institute welcomes scholars from all branches of ancient Near Eastern studies, from the Paleolithic to the Islamic period, from art history and archaeology to literary and Biblical studies.

Application deadline: November 15, 1983.

Mitchell S. Rothman, Administrative Director
American Schools of Oriental Research
4243 Spruce Street
Philadelphia, Pennsylvania 19104

American Academy in Rome

The Academy, founded in 1894 and chartered by Congress in 1905, is a working community of American scholars and creative artists. Scholarly research at the Academy focuses on a variety of fields, among them classical studies and archaeology, post-classical humanistic studies (including medieval, renaissance, and modern Italian studies), and the history of art. The Academy's resources include a major research library of over 95,000 volumes with particular strength in classical antiquity, Roman topography, and the history of art and architecture; as well as the Fototeca Unione, a research collection of over 25,000 photographs of ancient sites in Italy, North Africa, and the Middle East. The work of the Fellows is regularly presented through a series of seminars, colloquia, exhibitions, and concerts. There are weekly trips to historical monuments in Rome, and twice-a-year lengthy visits within Italy and to other parts of the Mediterranean. In addition, the Academy participates in the Union of 22 other national academies in Rome. Some scholarly studies by Fellows are published in the Academy's Papers and Monographs series.

Application deadline: November 15, 1983.

Calvin G. Rand, President
American Academy in Rome
41 East 65th Street
New York, New York 10021

American Antiquarian Society

The Society maintains a major research library in the general field of American history and culture through 1876. Included are extensive collections of books, pamphlets, broadsides, newspapers, graphic arts materials, and manuscripts. The Society's holdings are especially strong for projects in American bibliography; printing and publishing history; American literature; the history of American Puritanism; and social history, including family history and women's history. Fellows are provided carrels in the library. They may rent rooms and take meals in the Goddard-Daniels House, which is the center for the Society's educational and fellowship activities. Among opportunities for collegial association are the Society's seminars in early American political and social history and American literary history, lunchtime colloquia, and more informal gatherings.

Application deadline: January 31, 1984.

John B. Hench, Assistant Director
American Antiquarian Society
185 Salisbury Street
Worcester, Massachusetts 01609

American Center of Oriental Research

The Center in Amman, Jordan, is another one of the overseas institutes of the American Schools of Oriental Research. Founded in 1968, it provides a base for scholars and students carrying out research throughout this part of the Near East. ACOR is in a residential building close to the center of the city. It contains a library that, while small, is one of the best archaeological research libraries in Jordan. ACOR provides lodging, meals, and limited laboratory facilities. Although the major focus of the Center is on archaeological research and excavations, scholars working in all areas of Near Eastern studies from archaeology to cultural anthropology to Islamic studies use and are welcome at the Center.

Application deadline: November 15, 1983.

Mitchell S. Rothman, Administrative Director
American Schools of Oriental Research
4243 Spruce Street
Philadelphia, Pennsylvania 19104

American Philological Association— Thesaurus Linguae Latinae

The American Philological Association administers a fellowship for tenure at the Thesaurus Linguae Latinae in Munich. The Thesaurus Linguae Latinae, a lexicographical project underway for more than 80 years, aims at the production of an exhaustive lexicon of ancient Latin. It is governed by an international commission representing national academies and learned societies in most European countries and the United States. The TLL possesses a fine library in the field of classics with particular emphasis in Latin language and lexicography. The TLL has a permanent staff and a body of Fellows (currently from Austria, Britain, Italy, the Netherlands, Spain, and Switzerland as well as West Germany), who work together on the production of the Thesaurus and pursue various individual projects in the study of Latin as well. The work of the Fellows at the TLL involves intensive training in Latin lexicography and opportunity to work on specific articles in the Thesaurus. Fellowship tenure will run from July 1984 through June 1985.

Application deadline: November 15, 1983.

Roger S. Bagnall, Secretary-Treasurer
American Philological Association
617 Hamilton Hall
Columbia University
New York, NY 10027

American Research Center in Egypt

The Center, a consortium of thirty-one North American universities and museums, was founded in 1948 to promote research in Egypt. The broad aims of ARCE are to obtain a fresh and more profound knowledge of Egypt and the Near East through scholarly research, to disseminate knowledge of Egypt, and to promote American-Egyptian cultural relations. In pursuit of these goals the ARCE supports archaeological projects conducted by research teams under the direction of senior American scholars, a fellowship program which enables American scholars and students to conduct research in all periods and in all phases of Egyptian civilization, and special historical and literary projects in Egypt in the following fields: archaeology and art history, Islamic studies, the social sciences, and the humanities.

Application deadline: November 30, 1983.

Paul E. Walker, Executive Director
American Research Center in Egypt
1117 International Affairs Building
New York, New York 10027

Center for Advanced Study in the Behavioral Sciences

The Center conducts a residential post-doctoral fellowship program for scholars from this country and abroad who show unusual promise or distinction as productive workers in their respective fields. The Center tries to bring together each year a group of Fellows that is diverse in institutional and disciplinary background, but nonetheless includes some scholars with overlapping substantive or methodological interests. Fellows are afforded opportunities for reading, study, reflection, and writing, as well as for participation in seminars or workgroups. Fellowships have been awarded in anthropology, art history, classics, economics, education, history, law, linguistics, literature, musicology, philosophy, political science, psychiatry, psychology, and sociology. Nominations for consideration as a Fellow are accepted from any member of the academic community.

Application information: Nominations accepted at any time; fellowship arrangements normally completed 9–18 months in advance of fellowship tenure.

Robert A. Scott, Associate Director
Center for Advanced Study in the Behavioral Sciences
202 Junipero Serra Boulevard
Stanford, California 94305

Council on Foreign Relations

Established in 1921 to study foreign policy, international economics, politics, and military strategy, the Council on Foreign Relations, an educational and research institute, is a unique forum bringing together leaders from the academic, public, and private worlds. Since 1967, the Council's International Affairs Fellowship program has offered young American men and women an opportunity to broaden their expertise in international affairs. The distinctive character of these fellowships lies in the provision of contrasting experiences for young professionals working at the nexus of policy research and policy action. The program enables scholars as well as foreign policy professionals from the private sector to apply their humanistic skills and perspectives in a policy-oriented environment through experience in public service; conversely, government officials are afforded the opportunity to assess key issues in a scholarly atmosphere free from the pressures of decision-making.

Nominations for Fellows are solicited from approximately 3,000 members of the foreign policy community; other qualified individuals may apply without nomination. While Fellows have usually come from the fields of political science, economics, and law, candidates representing other humanistic disciplines, particularly history and philosophy, are also encouraged to apply.

Application deadline: October 31, 1983.

Alton Frye, Director
International Affairs Fellowship Program
Council on Foreign Relations
58 East 68th Street
New York, New York 10021

Hastings Center

The Center was founded in 1969 by an interdisciplinary group of biologists, physicians, philosophers, lawyers, theologians, and social scientists who were concerned that advances in medicine, biology, and the behavioral sciences were posing enormously difficult ethical dilemmas with significant social, cultural, and legal implications. The Center concentrates its research on ethical issues in the biomedical and social sciences. Death and dying, health policy, control of behavior by means of drugs and psychotherapeutic techniques, mass genetic screening, policy aspects of social science research, occupational health, medical innovation, human-subjects research, and applied and professional ethics are a few of the topics which have been or are currently being studied.

The fellowship program supports promising scholars in ethics and the life and social

National Endowment
for the Humanities

Advanced Study Centers

sciences. Applicants must have a doctorate or an advanced degree in any relevant field. Fellowship tenure begins September 1, 1984.

Application deadline: January 1, 1984.

Daniel Callahan, Director

The Hastings Center: Institute of Society, Ethics and the Life Sciences

360 Broadway

Hastings-on-Hudson, New York 10706

Huntington Library

The Huntington is a major center for research in British and American literature and history, the history of science, and British art. Nearly 1,400 readers come each year from around the world to use its growing collections, which consist of well over 300,000 rare books, 200,000 reference books, and 5,000,000 manuscripts. National Endowment for the Humanities Fellows are provided with office space, and work as closely as they wish with Huntington Senior Research Associates or other staff members for assistance in particular fields. A cordial atmosphere fosters the collegial exchange of ideas among scholars.

Applications by letter accepted from October 1 to December 31, 1983.

Martin Ridge, Coordinator of Research Activities

The Henry E. Huntington Library

1151 Oxford Road

San Marino, California 91108

Institute for Advanced Study: School of Social Science

The Institute was founded in 1930 as a community of scholars where intellectual inquiry could be carried out in the most favorable circumstances. It devotes special attention to identifying young people of accomplishment and promise. Members of the Institute are also part of the larger community of Princeton, with its University and its many institutions of sist of one two-year Junior Fellowship, the first year only of which is assisted by NEH funding, and a Senior Fellowship for which the tenure period may range from six to twelve months. For Junior Fellowship candidates in particular, the significance of the proposed project as a contribution to scholarship and its potential for publication as a book will be major factors in making the award.

Application Deadlines: December 1, 1983 (Senior Fellowship); November 15, 1983 (Junior Fellowship).

Thad W. Tate, Director

Institute of Early American History and Culture

Box 220

Williamsburg, Virginia 23187

National Humanities Center

The National Humanities Center annually offers 35–40 fellowships for scholars in the humanities to work at the Center during the academic year. Fellows pursue their individual research in private studies with library service and manuscript preparation assistance from the Center's staff. The Center has facilities for lectures, seminars, and conferences. Lunch is served daily in its central commons. The Center's site in the Research Triangle Park of North Carolina is between Chapel Hill, Durham, and Raleigh. Housing for Fellows and their families is found in these communities, near the campuses of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Duke University, and North Carolina State University.

Fellowships are available to scholars from all fields of the humanities and to humanistically inclined scholars from the natural sciences and the social sciences. Approximately one third of the Center's fellowships are awarded to young scholars, normally three to ten years beyond graduate study, and the rest to scholars at later stages of their careers. Scholars may apply to carry out individual projects or vanced scholars. Preference is given to those whose research is completed and who need writing time free from normal teaching and administrative responsibilities. Each scholar receives living quarters on or near the School grounds, a private office, a monthly stipend, and medical insurance; also available are a large research collection of Southwestern Indian arts, library assistance, and editorial consultation. Fellows are typically in residence for the eleven months from September through July, although applications for shorter tenure periods (six to eleven months) may be submitted. On the School's campus, scholars enjoy the solitude and privacy necessary for thinking and writing, balanced by stimulating interaction among members of a diverse intellectual community. Support for the fellowships is provided by the National Endowment for the Humanities and the School's Weatherhead Resident Scholar Endowment.

Application deadline: February 1, 1984.

Douglas W. Schwartz, President

NEH Scholar Program

School of American Research

Post Office Box 2188

Santa Fe, New Mexico 87501

Villa I Tatti—Center for Italian Renaissance Studies

The Center, located near Florence, is devoted to advanced study of the Italian Renaissance in all its aspects: the history of art; political, economic, and social history; the history of philosophy and religion; and the history of literature, music, and science. The Center at I Tatti was founded on the principle that maturing scholars working independently profit by close association with each other, with leaders in their fields, and with scholars of various interests, ages and levels of achievement. The Center provides the resources of its excellent research and learning. The School of Social Science at the Institute for Advanced Study each year includes as members a group of some twelve to fifteen post-doctoral Fellows who constitute a genuinely interdisciplinary and international group of scholars. Between a half and a third of the total visiting members are chosen to make up a working group on some particular but rather broadly defined field of study that changes from year to year. Members are expected to pursue only their own research, but the School organizes a weekly seminar at which members as well as invited guests present their ongoing work. The School is not wedded to any particular approach, but encourages social science with a historical and humanistic bent.

Application deadline: December 1, 1983.

Harry Woolf, Director

The Institute for Advanced Study

Princeton, New Jersey 08540

The Institute of Early American History and Culture

The Institute of Early American History and Culture is dedicated to the furtherance of study and publication in the colonial, Revolutionary and early national periods of American history, and in the related history of the British Isles, Europe, West Africa, and the Caribbean. Its field of interest embraces all aspects of early American life—social, scientific, and aesthetic developments no less than political, military, and economic affairs. Founded in 1943, the Institute is an autonomous organization sponsored jointly by the College of William and Mary and the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation. In addition to the awarding of post-doctoral fellowships, the Institute is regularly involved in the planning and support of scholarly conferences; and it is the publisher of the William and Mary Quarterly and of numerous monographs and documentary editions. While Fellows devote most of their time to research and writing, they are also encouraged to participate in the varied activities of the Institute's staff, whose senior members are all working scholars. Fellowship offerings con-projects connected with one of two seminars contemplated for 1984–85, one on the Bicentennial of the U.S. Constitution, and the other on patronage of the arts and learning. All applications are judged by a panel of leading scholars from the humanities.

Application deadline: December 10, 1983.

Kent Mullikin, Assistant Director

National Humanities Center

7 Alexander Drive

Research Triangle Park, North Carolina 27709

Newberry Library

The Newberry, founded in 1887, is a privately endowed independent research library dedicated primarily to study in the humanities. Its collections are composed of over one million volumes and five million manuscripts, with a strong general collection embracing history and the humanities within Western Civilization from the late Middle Ages to the early twentieth century. Certain of the Newberry's special collections are internationally noted, including materials in the following fields: discovery, exploration, and settlement of the New World; American Indian history; the American West; family and social history; literature and history of the Midwest, especially the Chicago Renaissance; the Renaissance in Europe; Portuguese and Luso-Brazilian history; cartography; music history and theory; printing; and early philology and linguistics. A variety of fellowships, conferences, and seminars enriches the Newberry's academic community.

Application deadline: January 15, 1984.

Richard H. Brown, Director of Research and Education

The Newberry Library

60 West Walton Street

Chicago, Illinois 60610

School of American Research

The School of American Research, a center for advanced studies in anthropology and related disciplines (including history, history of art, and archaeology), concentrates on six programs: scholars in residence, advanced seminars, archaeology, Indian-arts research, publication, and public education. Each year, the School awards fellowships to five ad-library of over 100,000 volumes, an archive of over 200,000 photographs, and private studies. In addition, Fellows have access to the libraries, archives, and collections in Florence, among the largest and most important in Italy. Fellowships are available to scholars in the earlier stages of their careers.

Application deadline: November 1, 1983.

Craig Hugh Smyth, Director

Villa I Tatti—Center for Italian Renaissance Studies

Via di Vincigliata 26

50135 Florence, Italy

Winterthur Museum and Gardens

Winterthur Museum and Gardens, located near Wilmington, Delaware, is a public museum and horticultural center as well as a specialized teaching and research center for the study of American art and cultural history. Its resources for advanced study include more than 70,000 domestic artifacts from the seventeenth through the nineteenth centuries and the holdings of a modern research library. The library's printed book collections feature Anglo-American visual materials of the eighteenth and the nineteenth centuries, for example, architectural books and manufacturers' trade catalogs. The manuscript and microfilm collections emphasize personal and business materials relating to American art and craftsmanship, for example, artists' sketch books, cabinetmakers' account books, tax lists, and inventories.

The advanced study program is designed to promote research in the history of American art and American cultural and social history, with a special emphasis on material culture. Scholars from any humanities field, and from museums as well as colleges and universities, are encouraged to apply for fellowship and housing support. A series of conferences and seminars enriches the program of interchange between staff, researchers, and the students and faculties of associated graduate programs.

Application deadline: March 1, 1984.

Kenneth L. Ames, Office of Advanced Studies

Winterthur Museum

Winterthur, Delaware 19735

National Endowment for The Humanities
Division of Fellowships & Seminars, Room 316
1100 Pennsylvania Avenue, N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20506

Official Business
Penalty for Private Use
$300

Postage and Fees Paid
National Endowment
for the Humanities

NEH-635

Please Post

FIRST CLASS MAIL