
What Is the NEH/Reader's Digest Teacher-Scholar Program?

As a part of its effort to improve the content and quality of humanities education in the nation's schools, the National Endowment for the Humanities, in partnership with a fund established by DeWitt Wallace, founder of Reader's Digest, has instituted a new program for elementary and secondary school teachers. Under the Teacher-Scholar Program, fifty-three teachers from around the nation will receive support for an academic year of full-time independent study in history, literature, foreign languages, and other disciplines of the humanities.

The Teacher-Scholar Program is governed by the conviction that students benefit most when teachers have a mastery of their disciplines and are themselves actively engaged in learning. The program is therefore designed to give recipients an opportunity to spend a year increasing their understanding of texts, topics, and issues central to the subjects they teach.

The program allows for one award in each state, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, and the U.S. Virgin Islands and is intended to replace the applicant's academic-year salary or supplement sabbatical pay up to the amount of the academic-year salary. The stipend may be as high as $27,500 and may be supplemented by other grants or sabbatical support to equal the recipient's 1988-89 salary. There will also be an award of $500 to purchase books for the teacher's school and a $500 honorarium for a mentor, should the recipient elect to work with an expert in the field of his or her study.

Intellectual Focus

The Teacher-Scholar Program focuses on rigorous academic study, with particular emphasis on the examination of significant issues and important primary and secondary works central to one or more of the humanities disciplines. A recipient may establish a working relationship with nearby scholars, academic libraries, archives, or museums. A recipient may enroll in as many as two college courses or other educational programs during the tenure of the award (provided such course work is directly relevant to the proposed project). Or a recipient may work alone in his or her own setting. In any case, the focus of the year's activity should be intensive study on a well-defined topic in the humanities.

The National Endowment for the Humanities

The National Endowment for the Humanities is an independent grant-making agency established by Congress in 1965 to support research, education, and public projects in the humanities.

The Endowment funds work in the humanities through programs administered by five divisions — Education Programs, Fellowships and Seminars, General Programs, Research Programs, and State Programs — and by two offices, Challenge Grants and Preservation.

In the act establishing the Endowment, the term humanities includes, but is not limited to, the study of the following disciplines: history; philosophy; languages; linguistics; literature; archaeology; jurisprudence; the history, theory, and criticism of the arts; ethics; comparative religion; and those aspects of the social sciences that employ historical or philosophical approaches.

Any project in the humanities is eligible for support under the Teacher-Scholar Program. The Endowment does not support projects in the creative or performing arts, however, or projects that are concerned primarily with educational theory, educational research, educational psychology, school management, child development, counseling, or the acquisition of basic skills.

Conditions of Eligibility

Teachers may apply for a teacher-scholar award if they

1. are employed full-time in elementary, middle, or high schools and have teaching responsibilities primarily in the humanities;
2. have completed at least three years of full-time teaching at the time of application and intend to return to teaching for at least two years after completing the project;

3. are U.S. citizens or foreign nationals who have been residents of the United States or its territories for at least three years immediately preceding the time of application.
